Incarnation School accepts children without regard to race, color, creed, nationality or ethnicity.

Philosophy of Incarnation School

Incarnation School, located in Washington Heights in the New York Archdiocese, is dedicated to the education of every child in its care. The administration, faculty and staff of Incarnation School undertake this responsibility within the context of Catholic tradition and doctrine. We affirm the uniqueness of each child and concentrate on the intellectual, spiritual, moral, esthetic, social and physical growth of each student. We strive to provide a climate in which each student will feel safe and will mature as a thinking, ethical person, sensitive to the needs of others.

Through the teaching of Catholic doctrine and values we affirm our faith by providing opportunities for spiritual growth and a deepening of religious convictions. It is our belief that an emphasis on religious education and a strong academic program will lead to the growth of healthy, well-rounded individuals with a sense of physical, emotional and social well-being who will become useful, happy and productive members of society.

We provide a variety of learning opportunities in order to address the different learning styles and needs of our students. We advocate the laying of a foundation based on concrete experience and practical application, leading to the development of higher, more sophisticated, more abstract levels of thinking and problem solving. We offer enrichment and extra-curricular activities in order to help the students cultivate appropriate social skills and to instill in them a sensitivity to the world around them.

It is important that the community of parents, administration, teachers, staff and religious leaders of Incarnation School accept the school philosophy and work together in order to fully realize the goals of our school. As we move forward, we continue to encourage a mutual respect among all adults and children, working toward the same goals and values, strong in our faith and our commitment to the community of Incarnation School.
